After a downpour of rain the day before the enduro, many riders would describe the Moonshine Enduro as muddy. Reaching temperatures in the 80s made for a hot race day.

The Moonshine Enduro celebrated in its seventh year since it returned to New Straitsville. There were more than 120 riders in attendance that raced to earn the prestigious "moonshine jug."

The terrain consisted of 80 ground miles with 7 sections. In total there were 15 checks.

The breakdown of the sections included:

- Section 1 - 3.2 E
- Section 2 - 6.0
- Section 3 - 4.8 E
- Section 4 - 3.2
- Section 5 - 3.2 A only
- Section 6 - 5.2 A/B
- Section 7 - 6.4

Although the technical southern Ohio layout was made a little more treacherous by mother nature unleashing rain the night before, traction was not too bad.

Several sections did develop nasty mud holes due the rain.

Johnny Barber (HSB) took the Moonshine Enduro overall win. Barber dropped 23 points throughout the day, while second-place finisher, Zach Klamfoth (KTM), dropped 30 points.

A point behind Klamfoth, was Cody Meeks (KTM) in third. Meeks was also the Overall A winner and 200A class rider. Mark McGrath (KTM) and Jeff Johnson (HSB) rounded out the top five finishers.

The overall B went to Rob Gorst (KTM), a rider in the Sr B class.

The Appalachian Championship Enduro Series (ACES) is a traditional time-keeping enduro series.

The season continues with rounds three and four on back-to-back days. On June 9 and 10 the Little Raccoon Classic Enduro, hosted by the Appalachian Dirt Riders, will take place near McArthur, Ohio. This two-day event will be the 2012 AMA ISDE Qualifier.
